

New York City Style

The Style of Comfort

If happiness had a color, then it would surely be found in Melissa Pravato's color wheel.

Spending her entire career in the architecture, design and fashion industries, Pravato focuses on client comfort and satisfaction, and she defines her signature style with sophisticated colors, clean lines, bold-scaled prints and old mixed with new. Listen to her talk, and you'll realize there's a reason clients have a hard time keeping this designer all to themselves: She's got an exceptional knack for learning their preferences and exceeding expectations.

Approaching client relationships like partnerships,

Melissa Pravato

Pravato travels the globe in search of unique inspirations. While she learned much from her construction-developer father, she gives credit to her time spent in the global fashion industry for forging her knowledge of architecture and her love for design.

"My experience enables me to introduce designs, fabrics and textures in ways that balance a room's lighting or construction," Pravato says. "The best part of my job is the ability to create an interior that uniquely reflects each individual's style and emerges into a design that inspires and promotes my clients' well-being."

